The Jazz Age

The Jazz Age was started during the Harlem Renaissance making jazz more popular than when it was first originated. The Jazz Age ties into the flapper image and in the Harlem Renaissance because there were new dances, music, and performers. The flappers danced to many new songs from the Jazz Age by listening to the radio also invented in the 1920s tying into new technology as well. The Jazz Age spread African American culture, similar to the Harlem Renaissance.

Jazz created a new form of entertainment as well because many people danced along to the music because there was more leisure time to do so. The music that was played during the Jazz Age came from slave songs which is a major part of African American culture. The Jazz Age is a major aspect of the Roaring Twenties because is created the "loose" moral standard of living that was established at the time of the 1920s.

One of the most famous jazz performers of the 1920s was Louis Armstrong. Louis Armstrong recorded with King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band in 1923. Armstrong improvised his long trumpet solos during the 1920s. Louis was nicknamed "Satchmo", and was born and raised in the city of New Orleans where jazz first originated. He was truly one of the most memorable performers of the Roaring Twenties.
